1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-25 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Frohardt et al (US 4,830,504) and Wulf et al (US 5,028, 800), taken together, in view of Piwonka-Corle et al (US 5,910,842).

It is known in the art to measure the output of a light source to allow for compensation for beam intensity drift or the like, and to measure a reference and a sample in the same position; see Frohardt et al, with reference sensor 56 to compensate for changes in light source intensity (column 6, lines 34-35) and the calibration standard 44 (column 4, lines 38-48).

It is known in the art to obtain a measure of the light source intensity in other manners that the manner shown by Frohardt et al, Wulf et al, for example, shows another known manner of making such a measurement in which the light being direct to the sample position and from the sample position to cross, with a reference sample being positioned at the crossing point to measure intercept the light beam before it encounters the sample at direct it to the detector. The use of this known alternative method to obtain the intensity of the light beam in a system of Frohardt et al would have been obvious. It would have also been obvious to provide a reference in the place of the sample of Wulf in the manner taught be Frohardt et al. The reference sample of Wulf et al is placed in the path while the test sample remains in position, and is interposed at the crossing point at a fixed time period.

Wulf et al shows using curved mirrors to focus and direct the light. Piwonka-Corle et al also shows this use of curved mirrors; and in particular shows an arrangement in figure 1 in which light is collimated and then focused by a pair of mirrors (16, 17). Those in the art could choose appropriate mirrors and adjust the arrangement as convenient.

3. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
